Impacting Workers Compensation Expenses

Health care costs are on the rise, attorney represented claims have increased substantially, and employees have a tendency to say an injury is work related even when it is not. How do we as businesses combat this? What can we do to reduce the worker comp costs? Every dollar spent on a worker compensation claim is a dollar that we are unable to spend on our mission. Sandy Johannes will share some success stories from Goodwill Industries of Southeastern Wisconsin and Metropolitan Chicago.

ALICE - (Alert, Lockdown, Inform, Counter, Evacuate) - Surviving the Active Shooter

Most institutions and organizations rely on traditional stand-alone “lockdown” protocols that can be deadly if you are in a location which cannot be secured or your secure location is breached by the intruder. When faced with an Active Shooter, the ALiCE Program, (Alert, Lockdown, inform, Counter, Evacuate) prepares individuals who may find themselves facing a violent intruder. A comprehensive approach integrates strategies using environmental design, technology, communication, law enforcement response and proactive mindset for those in immediate danger.

Violent intruder defense training is needed at every institution or organization to Save Lives! The majority of casualties from Active Shooter events happen within the first four to ten minutes. The critical gap in time between when Law Enforcement arrives is where the ALiCE program concentrates. The action taken by citizens under attack during these critical first minutes can mitigate the number of lives lost. People in the crisis zone have only minutes or even just seconds to live while waiting for law enforcement to arrive. The presentation at GILPS 2012 will give valuable information on the ALiCE program and what each organization can give to their employees: “Options” to survive an Active Shooter event.

QuickFire Disaster Experience

This simulation will put you in the throes of real-life disaster situations – as they unfold. You will make critical decisions and deal with the consequences of those decisions! After you've finished, you'll understand the importance of advance disaster and continuity planning.

Chances are that while you read this, an unexpected disaster is causing an organization stress and confusion and is affecting its long-term ability to provide products and services to its customers. Are the organization's leaders prepared to handle it? Will they be able to recover? Disasters of every shape, size, look and feel happen all the time, affecting businesses, people's jobs, lives and families.

This session has been designed to put you in the throes of a real-life disaster situation, as it unfolds. You will make the critical decisions any organization will have to make - and deal with the consequences of those decisions! After you've finished, you'll understand the importance of planning in advance for a disaster or other business disruption.

You'll never want to be caught unprepared again!
