Michael McCorkle, Senior Vice President and Global Head of Enterprise Business Continuity, First Data

Joseph Anarumo, VP, Global Investigations, Office of Global Security, First Data

Pamela Gott, Vice President, Global Cyber Security and Fraud Organization, First Data

For government and industry leaders, the risk of a cyber-attack has become an ever present concern for their organizations. The issue requires strong leadership, organizational buy-in and more than ever...the collaboration and insights of partners. In this senior leadership session, we are looking for strong commentary around the following: • Cyber risk and the changing role of leadership • The need for security culture within an organization • Public-Private Partnerships to tackle cyber risk--strategies for building more productive partnerships between government and industry

11:00 am - Noon

WORKSHOP A: Cyber Vulnerabilities of Cities: Understanding the Cyber Risks to Urban Centres

Grand Ballroom Centre

Dr. Tiago de Jesus, Research Associate Infrastructure Resilience Research Group Faculty of Engineering and Design, Carleton University

A growing challenge for urban planners, managers and decisionmakers is to ensure that cities are resilient against cyberattacks. A unique feature of urban centres is its dependence on a multitude of vital services. From public transportation to emergency services, to water and wastewater management, cities depend on critical services to operate normally. In this workshop, participants will discover the vulnerabilities that can expose cities to cyber risks that can cause the functional breakdown of urban centres. This session will provide a strategic understanding of the cyber threats, risks and vulnerabilities that can impact the operation of cities.
