Gold Coast mum's idea sparks Saf Organics business making $500k

The Gold Coast woman has turned a product she made in her kitchen into a booming business.

When she sent the manufacturer her deodorant it included her hand written recipe but now Saf Organics has grown from one product to selling 23 items, she said.

"It's been a journey. Every time I look at a $5 note I look at it differently, it's not the littiest note, its done lots for us," she noted.

The mum-of-four said every time she launches a new product it sells out before it even hits the warehouse and the most recent launch was a sensitive skincare range.

"After travelling Australia for 13 months and learning about the amazing native plants we have in our own country our skincare range was launched. When we say vitamin C, people think of citrus but we have got a Kakadu plum that has over 100 times the vitamin C benefits with the highest concentration in the world so we included that in our serum," she said.

"It's just been launched as part of our skincare bundle. It's a five step bundle, not eight or nine products and includes a cleanser, moisturiser, vitamin C and masks but we don't do clay masks. You apply it and go to bed it's a beauty mask - it's a quick five step routine and it's been

Aussie mum reveals how she started a business empire with just $5 notes saved from her shopping trips - and now she's making $60,000 A MONTH

Bridie Pearson-jones For Daily Mail Australia
06 May 2023, updated 14:57 06 May 2023

Within four months she'd saved $1,500 and decided to start her business, Saf Organics.

Now she turns over about $60,000 a month and says other mums are constantly asking for more products.

"It all started when I became a mum," Teggie told Daily Mail Australia.

"I just picked up a spray deodorant. And then picked up my newborn to breastfeed.

"And I thought, 'oh my god, this child is suffocating' (on the fumes).

"So that's when my search for a good deodorant started. A natural deodorant with no fumes, a low toxic... and there was just no such thing at the time nine years ago."

Mum's five-dollar dream: From humble beginnings to award-winning skincare brand

Buy March 27, 2023

MORGAN KOPITKE APRIL 3, 2023

The award-winning skincare brand has just celebrated its fourth year in business after starting as a side hustle in Teggie's kitchen, and is now a six-figure business being manufactured and distributed across the country.

Saf Organics is an Australian-owned and made plant-based organic brand as a low-tox alternative with 100% organic and cruelty-free ingredients and its products are formulated to nourish the skin with clean Australian ingredients.

The brand sells hair, skincare, body and bath, and health and hygiene products.

Having an opportunity to start her own business was creating an award-winning skincare brand. That's exactly what happened to Teggie Mimi-Ozalp, founder of Saf Organics.

It all began when she sprayed on some deodorant and immediately breathed her little one. It was then that she became aware that her bub was breathing in the fumes from the deodorant, prompting her to embark on a mission to create a 100% natural alternative.

Concentrating on ingredients in her kitchen at home.

Saf Organics founder and low-tox enthusiast Teggie Mimi-Ozalp is refreshing a new local skincare range, inspired by Aboriginal medicines.

But the journey to creating the Saf Organics brand started four years ago with just a humble five-dollar note. "I was triggered when I used a spray deodorant on my one job, and then breathed my child straight afterwards. They were breathing in the fumes I just sprayed. That moment is what started everything."

She set about creating a 100 per cent natural deodorant, experimenting with ingredients in her kitchen at home. At that time, there weren't many natural products on the market, so a stay-at-home mum on a single income, dipping into her family savings to start a business wasn't an option. "Every time I grabbed myself a coffee, it'd take the five dollar note change. I cleaned out the house and sold things we no longer needed, for five dollars," Ms Mimi-Ozalp said. "I collected five dollar notes for months, and then I ended up with $1500. It was enough to start the website and have my labels designed and buy enough for 500 products. Once I

Now with four children in tow and an award-winning skincare brand to her name, she's gearing up to launch a new local skincare range inspired by Indigenous Australian bush medicines. Simple and effective, the range includes a cleanser, moisturiser, vitamin C serum, sleep mask and eye cream. The inspiration behind this range came when Teggie and her family packed up their lives into a caravan and road-tripped around the country during covid. "We got to Outback Australia and one of Indigenous hosts, we realised that everything we use as needed, is actually both medicine and has so many healing properties."

All products are bioactive, plant-based, Australian owned and made, 100 per cent organic and cruelty free. Saf Organics
