

COOGEE

Top gong for port

PORT Coogee has been voted the best master planned community in Australia, taking the honour at the recent Property Council of Australia Innovation and Excellence Awards.

The seafront community claimed the trophy over six other finalists, with the Property Council chief executive Peter Verwer saying owner Port Catherine Developments and developer Australand Holdings had created a visionary project.

Australand WA general manager Tony Perrin said it was great to see Port Coogee recognised at a national level.

“When compared to the strong field of seven national entrants,

Port Coogee stood out for its comprehensive planning which began over 20 years ago,” he said.

“The Award for Best Master Planned Community validates this creative thinking which allowed the transformation of the Coogee coastline into the impressive integrated community and environmentally sensitive coastal marina we see today.”
