

Jürgen Scheftlein

Jürgen Scheftlein is policy officer in the European Commission's Directorate-General for Health and Consumers. His fields of responsibility are mental health/mental disorders and dementia. He is a historian by academic qualification. After studying history, German language and literature and Political Sciences in Cologne, he worked for the Federal German Ministry of Development Cooperation. In 1997, he took up a position as a civil servant in the European Commission services. After several years in the Directorate-General for Enterprise, he changed to the Directorate-General for Health and Consumers in 2004.