

RCSI INVITES APPLICATIONS FOR

RCSI LEADS IN OBSTETRICS AND GYNAECOLOGY, PERDANA UNIVERSITY, MALAYSIA

The Royal College of Surgeons in Ireland (RCSI), through its partnership with Perdana University (PU), Kuala Lumpur, licenses and delivers its five year Undergraduate Medical Programme, as part of the Academic Medical Centre for Excellence. The programme has 300 students, of which the first full-cycle cohort will graduate in September 2016 with degrees awarded by RCSI and the National University of Ireland. The curriculum is delivered largely by a team of RCSI specialist academic leads. Malaysia offers an exciting location to work and live as a modern, culturally diverse, dynamic country, with a myriad of possibilities for onward travel.

RCSI invites applications for the position of Lead Obstetrics and Gynaecology to work on the RCSI-PU Undergraduate Medical Programme. The position will be affiliated with the Department of Obstetrics and Gynaecology in RCSI Dublin. The role holder will deliver the RCSI curriculum in the multi-cultural environment of Kuala Lumpur and liaise with RCSI Dublin on curriculum delivery, examinations, and research matters, ensuring academic quality and consistency across the RCSI campuses.

RCSI is seeking a professional who is passionate about teaching, would like to experience working as an academic in an international environment, who demonstrates initiative, openness, resilience, and who is keen to explore possibilities for research and extending clinical partnerships in the region. Further information on this position, the RCSI-Perdana University programme, living in Malaysia, and the Department of Obstetrics and Gynaecology in RCSI Dublin are provided in the job description, which can be found on the RCSI careers webpage rcsi.ie/careers.

Applications for this post must be made through the RCSI careers webpage rcsi.ie/careers.
